Live the secret of the South

EYE of Africa, Johannesburg's premier residential golf community, where you will be tempted to take life outdoors and enjoy a healthy lifestyle complemented by beautifully landscaped parks, gardens and green open spaces.

With a Greg Norman designed golf course at the centre of this magnificent development, Eye of Africa will be a perfect blend of luxury and leisure. Medallist Developments, an Australian developer, is passionate about commitment, vision and proven expertise, creating extraordinary places to live that inspire residents to get more out of life.

The CHRONICLE spoke to Brad Tindale, chief operations officer Medallist, about the Eye of Africa. "We will be creating community exclusivity. Homes will be built to allow a variety of different housing styles, which will complement rather than compete against each other. Interested purchasers will be able to view our six different show homes at the official launch next February. Each home will be architecturally different," he says.

"Many hiking and biking trails, parks and playgrounds will be incorporated into the Eye of Africa, which will all be surrounded by grasslands, hills and woodlands. Some game will be introduced into the higher development areas and all trees planted will be native to the area.

"A village club, central park, braai facilities, children's club and enclosed cricket pitch, will all enhance the development," added Tindale.

An exclusive spa, next to the Central Park, will be opening early in 2009.

It's envisaged that the Eye of Africa development will be completely finished by 2014 but the golf course will be finished up front, showing commitment to the Eye of Africa community. "Phase two is almost sold out, but there are a few stands still available," says Olivia Kitchen (marketing executive Medallist). This development has been conceptualised to set an unrivalled lifestyle choice and feature all the comfort, space and amenities you could wish for.
